Extract of a Letter from an Officer in the Virginia Regiment, to his Friend in Philadelphia, dated at Belhaven, August 9, 1754.

SIR,

THE articles of capitulation mentioned in your Philadelphia news-papers, are cenſur'd, and thereby ſeem to reflect diſhonour on Col. Waſhington, who is a brave and worthy young gentleman, able to anſwer any thing that can be expected from one of his age and experience, as well as on all the corps then preſent, I have given you an account of the circumſtances we were in about the time of the engagement; and, for the ſatisfaction of our countrymen, as well as to let our conduct in a right light, I deſire you will have it put in the Pennſylvania Gazette.

JUNE 29th, we received certain intelligence, that the French were reinforced with 300 white men, and the ſame number of Indians, and that they intended to march immediately to attack us: Whereupon Col. Waſhington call'd a council of war, wherein it was reſolved to ſend an expreſs to haſten the independents to join us, and that in the mean time we ſhould ſet about fortifying ourſelves as well as the time would permit, and there wait the arrival of Capt. Lewis and Capt. Polſon, who were out on detachments, and to whom orders were ſent to join us with the utmoſt expedition. Capt. Mackay arrived at our camp at Gift's houſe in the night, and we were joined by our detachments next forenoon; when a council of war was again call'd, wherein it was unanimouſly reſolv'd, to retreat immediately, carrying all the public ſtores with us; and as we had but two very indifferent teams, and few horſes, the officers loaded their own horſes with ammunition, and left part of their baggage behind. Col. Waſhington ſetting them an example, by ordering his horſe to be loaded firſt, and giving four piſtoles to ſome ſoldiers to carry his baggage. We had 9 ſwivels, which were drawn by the ſoldiers of the Virginia regiment 12 miles of the moſt broken road on the Allegany mountain. The independents refuſed to aſſiſt in drawing the guns, or helping off with the ammunition; nor would they do duty as pioneers, which had an unhappy effect on our men; for they no ſooner learnt that it was not the proper duty of ſoldiers to perform theſe ſervices, than they became as backward as the independents. This was one great reaſon why we had not compleated our works before the attack.

On the 1ſt of July, we arriv'd very much fatigued at the Meadows, and had continued our retreat, but for want of horſes and conveniences to carry our ammunition. Our men had been 8 days without bread, and inſtead of a large convoy which we expected, there arriv'd only a few bags of flour. They were ſo harraſſed with working on the fortifications at Gift's, and marching, that they were not able to draw the ſwivels. We had certain intelligence, that the York independents had arrived at Alexandria 20 days before, and a report that they had got to Wills's creek, on their march to join us. Conſidering theſe circumſtances, it was thought moſt adviſeable to fortify ourſelves in the beſt manner, and there wait the arrival of our convoys and reinforcements, which we daily expected; and in the mean time an expreſs was ſent to inform them of our ſituation, and haſten them up. We ſet about clearing the woods neareſt to us, and carrying in the logs to raiſe a breaſt-work, and enlarge our fort.

July the 3d, by break of day, we were alarm'd by one of our centries, who was wounded by the enemy; about 9 o'clock we received intelligence by ſome of our advanced parties, that the enemy were within 4 miles of us, and that they were a very numerous body, and all naked. We continued to fortify, and prepare ourſelves for their reception. They came up with us before 11 o'clock, and by their furious attack, and ſuperior numbers, we expected they would ſtorm us at once, and therefore anſwer'd them only with a muſket ſhot now and then, as we could make ſure of an active fellow. The keeping up our fire made the enemy more ſecure, and expoſe themſelves the more, which was a principal reaſon of their loſing ſo many men on that occaſion. About dark they called to parly, and we ſaſpecting deceit, took but little notice of it at firſt; but they calling again and again, Van Braam was ſent to ſpeak with them, who ſoon returned, and aſſured us, that they were in earneſt. This was no diſagreeable news to us, who had receiv'd no intelligence of our convoys or reinforcements, and we had only a bag of flour, and a little bacon, for the ſupport of 300 men. We had no ſalt to have killed the milch cows we had, or we would have done before the engagement, and they, our greateſt dependance, immediately became the property of a ſuperior enemy. By the continued rains, and water in the trenches, the moſt of our arms were out of order, and we had only two ſcrews in the whole regiment to clean them; and what was ſtill worſe, one half of our men got drunk as ſoon as it was dark. Under theſe diſadvantageous circumſtances, and by the too great condeſcenſion of Van Braam, we agreed to the articles. Mr. Peyroney was dangerouſly wounded, and we much regretted the loſs of his ſervices on this occaſion.

When Mr. Van Braam return'd with the French propoſals, we were obliged to take the ſenſe of them from his mouth; it rain'd ſo hard, that he could not give us a written tranſlation of them; we could ſcarcely keep the candle light to read them by; and every officer there is ready to declare, that there was no ſuch word as aſſaſſination mentioned; the terms expreſſed were, the death of Jumonville. If it had been mentioned, we ſhould by all means have had it alter'd, as the French, during the courſe of the interview, ſeem'd very condeſcending, and deſirous to bring things to a concluſion: And upon our inſiſting, alter'd the article relating to ſtores and ammunition, which they wanted to detain; and that of the cannon, which they agreed to have deſtroy'd, inſtead of reſerv'd for their uſe.

The laſt article which relates to the hoſtages, is quite different from the tranſlation of it given to us: It is mentioned for the ſecurity of the performance of this treaty, as well as for the return of the priſoners: There never was ſuch an intention on our ſide, or mention of it made on theirs by our interpreter. Thus by the evil intention or negligence of Mr. Van Braam, our conduct is ſcrutiniz'd by a buſy world, fond of criticiſing on the proceedings of others, without conſidering circumſtances, or giving juſt attention to reaſons which might be offered to obviate their cenſures.

Let any of thoſe brave gentlemen who fight ſo many ſucceſsful campaigns over a bottle, imagine himſelf at the head of 300 men, whoſe lives in a great meaſure he is anſwerable for, labouring under all the diſadvantages above mentioned, and environ'd with 4 times his numbers of an active enemy, and would not be glad to accept of worſe terms than Col. Waſhington did? which were, all the honours of war, without the mention of aſſaſſination, or the other expreſſions mentioned in the articles objected to above. If he did not, it appears to me, that he might juſtly be ſaid to be acceſſary to the deſtruction of ſo many men, which would have been the inevitable conſequence of his miſtaken courage or obſtinacy. There is no reaſon to doubt but the whole affair was well conducted, when the French, who had particular orders to give quarter, and to pay the Indians with our scalps and spoils, were the first who discover'd an inclination to treat: That they had such orders, and intended no quarter, is certain from the mouth of one of their own officers. I will give you an account of the engagement wherein Jumonville was killed, in my next. They call it an assassination; for my part, I call it a brave little action: and, after hearing the whole, I doubt not but you will be of my opinion. I will always chearfully embrace an opportunity of being concern'd in such an assassination. I am, with respect,

Yours, &c.

CHARLES-TOWN, Sept. 26.

On Sunday last arrived here the Snow William, Capt Hunt, who left London the 14th of last Month, by whom we have an Account of the Deaths of Mr. John Nicholson of London, and Mr. John Stedman of Rotterdam, two eminent Merchants, who have had very large Concerns in this Trade. By Capt. Hunt we have also, a Letter from a Gentleman of good Authority in London, dated the 13th of August, from which we have taken the following Paragraph, viz.

" ——— You will doubtless have heard, that His " Maj-sty in Council has settled the Government of " GEORGIA, by appointing Capt REYNOLDS (a " distant Relative to the Lord Chancellor) Gover- " nor, and ——— Clifton Esq; Attorney General, " with Council, and proper Officers.—Messrs. Har- " ris, Habersham, Robinson, Russel, Graham, Jones, " Bryan, and Sir Patrick Houston, Bart. are named " of the Council, with others from England to make " the Twelve; and Mr. Habersham is Secretary to " the Province. The Port-Mahon Man of War at- " tends the Governor, who will soon embark. "

Other Letters from London, of a late Date, say, that the Toulon Squadron, instead of going against the Algerines, has been met with steering for America: And one of them very justly hints, that we in Carolina, as well as the People of New York, ought to be always strictly on our Guard, lest the French should involve us in a War before we are sufficiently provided for our Defence.

We are now assured, that His Majesty has been pleased to appoint Dougal Campbell, Esq; Clerk of His Court of Common Pleas in this Province.

By Capt. Lawrence from New-York, we have an Account of the Death of Robert Austin, Esq; who went off for his Health, in the Shoreham Man of War. By his Death, the Place of Controller of the Country Duties for this Port, is become vacant.
